

The Energy Star program was introduced by the USEPA in 1992 as a government-backed voluntary program in order to reduce the carbon dioxide emissions through energy efficiency measures. The program promotes voluntary partnerships with manufacturers of energy efficient products, and seeks to identify these products through the use of Energy Star logo.

Ultima T3A Converter Box received the approval of the US Department of Energy and Environmental Protection Agency's ENERGY STAR PARTNER rating for this revolutionary product.